Freight Details

In the perishable apple industry, we must use refrigerated freight trucks to get our product to its destination. Because of this, refrigerated freight is more expensive than regular freight due to the cooling and temperature control of the cargo area.

A freight liner holds 21 pallets, and each space is billed vertically – that is, if you purchase one pallet space and you ship one box on that pallet, you are still paying for the entire pallet space that can hold up to 185 boxes, depending on box sizes loaded onto it. Therefore, we require a 1 pallet minimum order so that per-unit cost is practical.

If you are using our freight company, we do not up-charge on the prices we are quoted. We ship to you at the same rate it costs us. If you would like to use your own freight company, you are more than welcome to. Apple pricing does not include freight charges. Freight charges are added to the base apple box price, and rounded up to the next dollar.

Below is our freight map with the 8 different shipping zones on it. The prices quoted here are for a FULL LOAD and not 1, 2, 3...6 pallets. Most freight companies include a surcharge for single pallets, up to a half load or more. There is also an additional fee for drops (stopping at multiple locations on the trip) if you have more than 1 fund raiser included in the shipment. These fees run $50 or more, depending on distance out of the way to drop. There may be additional costs, such as a lift gate or other incidentals. All of this is figured out with each shipment's total before committing to the fund raiser. Approximate freight prices are as follows:

Zone 1: $.50/box our trucks, $48/pallet approximately if not available – will vary
Zone 2: $157/pallet approximately
Zone 3: $113/pallet approximately
Zone 4: $167/pallet approximately
Zone 5: $184/pallet approximately
Zone 6: $189/pallet approximately
Zone 7: $202/pallet approximately
Zone 8: $267/pallet approximately
